THE PRINTERS' FIGHT

PRESENTS PHASES OF UNUSUAL INTEREST TO LABOR.

Campaign Being Waged on the Lines of Trades Unions Pure and Simple—A Test of Old School Ideas and Methods.

At the end of the first month of the greatest industrial struggle in the history of modern trades unionism the prospects seem bright for the printers establishing the eight hour workday in the United States and Canada, says Luke Grant in Chicago Record-Herald.

While the agitation for a reduction in the hours of labor has been carried on for years not only in the printing craft, but in many other trades as well, there are two phases of the present struggle that are of particular interest to the student of the industrial problem. Volumes have been written on the abstract benefits which come to the wage earner with shorter hours of labor. In those trades where the shorter workday has been established the real benefits are apparent also, but aside from that the present strike offers a practical opportunity of studying two phases of the problem that are of particular interest.

In the first place, it is one of the few strikes called by a labor organization which extends to the limits of its jurisdiction in two countries, and in the second place it will show whether the methods of "pure and simple" trades unionism are effective or not.

Most of the great strikes of recent years have been confined to certain localities, or if they have extended beyond the locality where they originated it has been because a firm or corporation was doing business in another part of the country.

The present strike affects not a corporation or a locality, but the entire printing industry in the United States and Canada. It is that phase of the question that makes it one of more than usual interest to the close observer of such movements.

Of recent years, at the end of each unsuccessful strike, the Socialists and the industrialists in the ranks of the labor unions have declared that the "pure and simple" trades union methods had outlived their usefulness. The Socialists have advocated "striking at the ballot box," and the industrialists have advocated an organization of all the workers in a particular industry under one head, so that all could strike at the same moment. The Socialists continue to strike at the ballot box, and the industrialists are busily engaged in trying to disrupt the old unions and reorganize them on different lines, but the printers are achieving practical results by the old methods.

No strike in recent times in this country has offered such an opportunity to study what is known as "pure and simple" trades unionism as the present struggle of the printers for an eight hour day. The question was discussed for years, the employers were warned at least eighteen months in advance, steps were taken to fill the war chest, conciliatory offers were made by the employers to avert the conflict, and the strike was finally called on the day set as a last resort.

Since the strike began it has been conducted along lines that even the employers cannot criticize. The press reports from the various points throughout the country have invariably contained a line stating that "no violence attended the strike." In every respect it is a test of modern trades unionism.

Should the movement end in failure it would not be conclusive proof that the "pure and simple" advocates are wrong. In one respect the printers failed to make adequate preparations for the struggle. The assessment voted at the St. Louis convention and afterward ratified by the membership of one-half of 1 per cent of the gross earnings for twelve months was not enough.

The leaders recognize that fact now, but they are in the struggle, and the membership, by a majority of 22,000, has voted a 10 per cent assessment. In all other respects the strike is being conducted in exact accordance with the ideas of the old school unionists.

The power of organization is well shown in the fight the members of the United Typothetae are making against the printers. Although they constitute but a small minority of the employers, they are the organized minority, and they are holding out firmly where the unorganized majority is being forced to yield. As is usual in every strike, a number of employers are breaking away from the Typothetae and treating with the union as individuals, but it takes a long time for that sort of campaign to be decisive. The Typothetae will have to yield as an organized body before the fight will end.

The printers, however, have the advantage in the way of organization. A majority of the competent printers of the country are in the ranks of the union, and competent printers cannot be made in a week or in a year. That makes the struggle largely one of endurance, which means, in other words, one of finance.

There are some strikes in which no amount of money would enable the strikers to win. If they are unskilled men, whose places can be filled, the employers have always the advantage in a strike. But with the printers the case is entirely different. If the printers lose in the present struggle it will be because of the lack of funds. If the members who are at work respond as liberally with their money as they indicated by their votes it would appear that the fight can be carried out to a successful termination for the men.

Struck For the Mules. Unionism stands for humanity to dumb beasts as well as humanity to man. The mule drivers in mine No. 6, Terre Haute, Ind., struck because they believed that the mules were not getting enough to eat. They remained out until the company took up the case and promised to supply enough hay and grain for the hungry mules.

ONLY ONE "BEST."

The People of Barre Give Credit Where Credit is Due.

People of Barre who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by cures in Barre. Here's Barre testimony:

Isaac Gonyea of 33 Branch street, Barre, Vt., says: "I have been bothered more or less for years with an aching back and sharp pains through the loins when stooping. My work requires a good deal of heavy lifting and as a rule in a damp place which, of course, aggravates my trouble. I learned of people here in Barre who had been cured by Doan's Kidney Pills, so I went to E. A. Brown's drug store and got a box. They did me a lot of good, and since I have used them there has been no pain in my back and I rest well nights. I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as an excellent remedy for backache."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Best Hay.

It is given as "the opinion of dealers that the best qualities of hay are no longer produced in the states bordering on the Atlantic coast, but come from the newer soils of the central prairie region." Of course in all the parts where there has been long cultivation and exceptional treatment is given the best is still produced. The rule, however, is, as stated, "The soils have had taken from them that which is necessary to make the best. The seed is of the same character as the crop.—Home and Farm."

Thomas I. Kidd of Chicago has been presented with a silver tea set by the elevated railroad employees in token of his services to the union while a vice president of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Kidd retires from the labor field to enter commercial business.
